The Blasphemy Against the Holy Ghost

The Setting and Importance in Jesus' Ministry

Jesus' healing ministry was rejected by the Pharisees by their attributing his miracles to the power of Satan. Even though they were his enemies, they couldn't deny the miracles actually happened, like we can today when a supposed faith healer supposedly heals a man who supposedly has one leg longer than the other, or when someone we've never seen before gets up out of a wheelchair; so, they denied the source of the miracles rather than their genuineness. Since Jesus did his miracles through the power of the Holy Spirit, when they attributed his miracles to Satan, they were saying the Holy Spirit is Satan. This was not a one-time accusation, and they didn't have insufficient knowledge, since Jesus did plenty of miracles to clearly prove he was the Messiah. Thus, this sin for them was unforgivable for the rest of their lives, with no possibility to believe the gospel and be saved.

Related to "the blasphemy of the Holy Ghost," was the Pharisees' demand for a sign from heaven. Apparently, they figured Satan could enable him to cast out demons, though Jesus showed how illogical that theory was since no divided kingdom can stand; but they thought Jesus wouldn't be able to do a sign from heaven, since that is God's realm. Jesus said he wouldn't give that generation any signs, except the sign of the prophet Jonah, meaning resurrection after three days in the belly of the earth, for Lazarus and himself. Although there are some exceptions, Jesus stopped healing all, publicly, all the time, without condition; and started healing only some, away in remote or mostly Gentile areas, privately, and often on the condition of faith.

The question is, when did the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost occur chronologically, since the gospel of Matthew is arranged topically? My opinion is Matthew moved a large amount of material forward from the period Luke described as the journey to Jerusalem, to Matthew's section on the rejection, in his chapters 11 and 12. I also assume Mark followed Matthew, possibly indicating Mark is a condensed version of Matthew without the teaching sections, rather than Matthew being an expansion of Mark with the teaching sections added.

Although Luke's language is somewhat general in the journey to Jerusalem section, there seem to be too many similarities in sequence and topic during the blasphemy of the Holy Ghost portion, for the accounts to refer to two separate chronological times: an earlier occurrence as related by Matthew and Mark, and a later referral back to its principles later in Luke. So I think it actually happened on the journey to Jerusalem, as recorded in Luke; and that Matthew moved it to his section on the rejection. The Holy Spirit wanted the mouth of three witnesses for many parts of Messiah's life, but as only John covered the early Jerusalem ministry, God probably reserved the journey to Jerusalem portion for Luke, but Matthew needed some of its material.

Some Similarities and Differences Between the Gospel Accounts

The Casting Out of the Dumb Demon and the Beelzebub Accusation. Matthew looks like he switched the healing of a blind, dumb demon-possessed man, for the exorcism of the non-blind, dumb demon-possessed man, that he moved forward from the journey to Jerusalem period, to make it a more serious rejection. In Matthew's flow, the rejection of a triple miracle – blind, dumb, demon possessed – followed immediately by the Beelzebub accusation and a request for a sign, shows the extreme wickedness of the religious leaders. Matthew says they were Pharisees, Mark says the scribes, and Luke implies it's some of the people that asked for a sign, as if to show humanity's guilt, rather than just the national leaders' guilt. Only in Matthew, do the people who witness the triple miracle consider, however shallowly, Jesus might be the Son of David, the Messiah of Israel. It's interesting Mark never even mentions the casting out of any dumb demon, blind or otherwise; but the scribes that came from Jerusalem to Galilee seem to be characterize all his exorcism as being empowered by Satan.

A Divided Kingdom Cannot Stand. In both the Matthew and Luke accounts, when Jesus is asked for a sign, it's said he "knew their thoughts," and talked about how Satan would not cast out Satan, so the request for a sign from heaven (Luke 11:16) is probably being contrasted with merely the earthly casting out of demons. As many have observed, it's interesting that Matthew is the one that has "if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God," whereas Luke says "with the finger of God," when Luke's account is often focused on the Holy Spirit. Of course, the Messiah of Matthew is also empowered by the Holy Spirit, and miraculously born of the Holy Spirit.

The Worse State of that Generation. This passage is very similar between Matthew and Luke, and not found in Mark. In both cases a cast out demon walks through dry places seeking rest and finding none; returns to find his previous host swept and garnished; and moves back in with seven other spirits more wicked than himself. Matthew, though, explicitly states that he finds the man empty when he returns. Israel did not accept the Messiah despite John and Jesus' cleansing ministries, so there was no Messiah within to keep the 'evil spirit' from returning. Matthew also makes it clear, the judgment is only upon "this generation," of Israel, not future generations of Israel.

The Men of Nineveh and the Queen of Sheba. Mark doesn't mention this part, and doesn't mention Jonah when he says no sign will be given. Jonah's representation of Jesus and Lazarus' resurrections relate to the national signs of resurrection to be given after the rejection of Jesus healing ministry. The men of Nineveh will condemn Jesus' generation because they had an organized, national repentance, like John and Jesus required per their preaching ministries. "The people of Nineveh ... put on sackcloth; ... for word came unto the king of Nineveh, and he ... covered him with sackcloth," Jonah 3:5-6. Also like the organized, national repentance a future generation of Israel will perform. "They shall look upon me whom they have pierced, ... and the land shall mourn, ... the family of the house of David apart, and their wives apart; the family of the house of Nathan apart, and their wives apart" (Zech. 12:10-12), etc. The Queen of Sheba will condemn that generation of Israel because she accepted Solomon's teaching ministry even though she had to travel a great distance; whereas that generation rejected the Holy Messiah and eternal Son of God's teaching ministry in their own towns.

Some Practical Applications for Today

The main importance of these passages for us today is probably that we can be sure God offered a physical kingdom to that generation of Israel, and he will establish the physical kingdom for a future generation of Israel. Paul said salvation is comprised of our past spiritual justification, our present practical sanctification, and our future physical glorification. To spiritualize everything away, as Covenant Theologians do when they replace physical Israel with the spiritual church, is to lose the New Testament teaching on one third of our salvation, since our future bodily glorification is inexorably linked to Israel's national glorification.

It's also to lose the meaning of most of the Old Testament scriptures, since the prophets spend so much of their content about the details of the coming, physical, Messianic kingdom. We not only need justification and sanctification, but we need a sure future hope. God gave us the last 9 chapters of Ezekiel, for example, so we can even be very familiar with an actual building we will one day see, the future temple in Jerusalem. Paul was brave enough to fight wild beasts at Ephesus because he knew his physical body would be resurrected. Who knows all the loss Christians suffer when this aspect of our salvation God provided instruction about in his word is spiritualized away.

Another thing these passages demonstrate is how natural, unregenerate men think and respond to God's revelation: even Messianic miracles were denied. Salvation through hearing the gospel is the only hope for men. We have to spread the gospel, not try to logically convince unregenerate men of spiritual things.

Finally, we can praise Messiah for his power and wisdom, since we see how even a nation of opponents were not able to thwart his goals and purposes.
